Sentosa's Underwater World is now home to 43 sand tiger sharks from South Africa, in what is believed to be the largest display of such sharks in the world.

Also known as the ragged tooth shark, these sharks may look menacing, but they are generally harmless to man and have small appetites - the entire school of 43 takes only 45kg of food a week.

The sharks will be on display for a year - or even longer if public response is good.
