

Rock Lunch Box

check list:

1. lunch box
2. newspaper
3. masking tape
4. paint
5. cut up sponge for paint
6. white glue
7. paint brush

1

Crumple up newspaper into rounded shapes, and tape them onto the top of your lunch box until it is completely covered. Then cover the top in masking tape.

2

Now, cover the bottom of the lunch box in masking tape. Make sure you don't tape the seal of the box.

3

To make the rock look real, paint the entire lunch box in gray paint and set aside to dry.

Use black paint to add squiggly rock lines around the rounded shapes.

4

Take a sponge and dab the black lines to blend them in.

5

6

Sponge some brown paint on the lunch box and spread the paint out a little with the dry end of the sponge.

7

Sponge on a different shade of gray. It's ok to layer the colours because after the gray dries, the brown will show underneath.

8

Now you can dab on a bit of black paint with your sponge.

9

Use a dry sponge to blend in the paint.

10

To create speckles on your rock, take a toothbrush, dip it in black paint, and spray the paint onto the rock by flicking the toothbrush with your thumb.

11

Now do the same thing with white paint to add white speckles. Once you've added all your speckles, take a sponge and dab the speckled paint.

12

Set it aside to dry.

13

When all the paint is dry, use a clean paintbrush to add a thin layer of white glue to the surface to give your rock a shiny, polished look.

An Artzooka lunch box that rocks!

Print out more makes from Kids' CBC's Artzooka: <http://www.cbc.ca/kidscbc/artzooka>